The Honor Research Registry (Honor) volunteers will be important to current and future research projects at the Emory Alzheimer's Disease Research Center (ADRC). The purpose of Honor is to have a group of volunteers who want to participate in future research studies on memory & thinking. By joining Honor you will learn about new research studies that are seeking volunteers. You will also receive our newsletter and invitations to educational events.

All Honor volunteers must have a "study partner" accompany them to their research visit. Your study partner will be asked questions about your memory and thinking. They will also be asked about your day to day functioning. A study partner is someone who has at least 10 hours of contact with you each week.

Honor is a long term study. We need to follow people over their lifetime to learn about memory and thinking in individuals. There are people in this study who have participated for over 15 years! Some have participated in as many as four different studies.

We hope to follow all Honor volunteers throughout their life. We have much more to learn about memory and thinking while people are living. Many people give the greatest gift – the gift of their brain after they die. We are learning a great deal from studying brain changes in people who are aging normally, without memory problems. For those people with disease, this gift provides your family with a "gold standard" final diagnosis.
